Interjet Airlines announced its continued expansion into 2020 adding service to new destinations with new flights and expanded service to current domestic and international markets.

“The U.S. is now our largest and most important international market,” said William Shaw, CEO for Interjet Airlines. “Our international business grew 27 percent year-over-year and our overall passenger traffic increased by seven percent. Load factors were up, RPK’s (revenue passenger kilometers) and ASK’s (available seat kilometers) both increased dramatically. The strategic plan we put into place in late 2018 is working and the airline is now running on all cylinders,” he added.

Julio Gamero, Interjet’s Chief Commercial Officer, commented the airline will continue to invest in expanding its U.S. footprint as well as other key international gateways, offering more nonstop service, competitive fares, free checked bags on select fares and business class legroom between seats. “We look forward to welcoming new and existing customers on board throughout the year,” he added.

The airline said it will continue to upgrade existing aircraft as well as adding new planes including the Airbus 320 and 321 equipment.
